

Cape Malay Cooking Safari
Code: CAP033
Option: CAPCMC

This interactive experience is with one of the country's oldest established communities that date back to their forced arrival as captives in the 1600's. As their land in the East was being occupied by European Colonists, dissenters were loaded onto sailing ships and banished to other colonies around the world, of which the Cape of Good Hope was one of these colonies. The Cape Malays were a talented and productive people and were deployed in building the Cape Colony. Amongst them were builders, architects, carpenters, tailors, traders, fishermen and gardeners. We visit this community that was confined to an area on the slopes of Signal Hill, called the Bo-Kaap or Cape Malay area.

Departing from your Cape Town city based hotel at approximately 08:45, your first stop will be a walking tour of the historical and heritage protected area of cobbled streets, colourful Cape Georgian homes, community corner stores and a number of mosques that were built between 1795 and 1958.

You will visit a Community Empowerment Project, the popular local spice (Masala) shop and the Bo-Kaap Museum. You will then visit a local resident host for an exciting encounter of her religious, cultural and culinary background within her home. You will participate in preparing and cooking samosas, roti (flat bread), and chicken or vegetable curry within her kitchen and around her table. Afterwards you will be transferred back to your hotel. The drop-off time will be approximately 13:00 – 13:15, except for Fridays, when your drop off time will be after 13:30.
